

VCS have officially offered the post of Chief Officer to Adam Knuckey

VCS have officially offered the post of Chief Officer to Adam Knuckey after a 6 month interim period.

Accepting the position, Adam has said:

“It is wonderful to be offered the opportunity to lead this brilliant organisation forward. We have made great strides over my interim period, and that improvement is set to continue. Of the last 6 months we have recruited 4 new skilled trustees to the centre; launched the VCS ‘Sign Me Up’ campaign in response to the borough led year of the volunteer; we have restructured our placements department and increased our weekly interviewing options by 50%. We have held some cracking events such as the Big Breakfast where we saw over 50 volunteers pick up our new kite mark award; continued to develop our partnerships to local organisations; and we are furiously churning out funding and tender applications to best support the needs of the borough for the coming year.

I hope to get out and around Sutton now to a greater degree, promoting our services and looking for fresh opportunities to grow the sector and hope to meet a great many new people to share exciting stories of volunteering. I would like to thank the incredible team and volunteers at VCS for the commitment, passion and time that they put into the work of developing our organisation. I couldn’t ask for a better team!”

If you are interested in meeting with Adam in his new role or with a member of our Volunteer Engagement group, please give us a call.
